Sample Topic:

It is commonly believed that nowadays main factors that affect a child's development are media, pop culture and friends. A different point of view is that family plays the most significant role.

Discuss both views and give your opinion.

Write at least 250 words.

Step 1:

Generate arguments for each point of view:

First of all, you have to identify the two opinions. These are:

1. External factors have more considerable influence on a child's development.
2. The family has a greater influence on a child's development.

Next, let's brainstorm for arguments that support each side:

1. External factors have a more considerable influence on a child's development.

- a. Children tend to copy the behavior of their favorite fictional characters.
- b. Children spend a lot of time with their peers.
- c. Technology has an all-pervasive impact on children.

2. The family has a greater influence on a child's development.

- d. Parents are always present in the life of a child.
- e. The younger the children are, the more malleable their character is.
- f. Parents can set boundaries and have more control over their children.

Step 2:

Choose your point of view:

For our essay, we will agree that although external factors influence the development of a child, parents and family still have the upper hand.

Our reason: A child's choice of friends, books or music depends on the values instilled in them by their parents.

Sample Answer:

It is often held that teachers, peers and the media have a significant influence on the life of children. While some people argue that these factors are predominant in shaping a child's future, others believe that parents impact their offspring in more critical ways. This essay will discuss both these points of view and argue in favor of the latter.

On the one hand, the books children read and the music they listen to form their belief system. In other words, children tend to copy the behavior of their favorite personality or fictional character. Moreover, when little ones work and play in groups, they are influenced by their peers. Finally, other factors, like the media, prompt children to want things regarded as fashionable. For instance, children demand toys that they see on television.

On the other hand, a child's personality is malleable at a very young age, and parents are always present in their life at this stage. Also, very young children love to imitate. For example, children who come from a dysfunctional family often exhibit behavioral problems at school. An emotionally secure environment at home is critical for the child's confidence. Moreover, parents also teach children about setting boundaries.

In my opinion, children's choice of friends, books or music depends on the values instilled in them by their parents. Therefore, parents hold more substantial sway over their offspring than media, pop culture and friends circle.

In conclusion, the outside world influences the intellectual and social development of children. However, I believe that it is parents who set the stage for these developments by laying a strong foundation from a very young age.
